

2025 DKEHeads Report

The 14th season of DKEHeads saw the first back-to-back champion in league history (GOBias Industries) and strong parity (all teams finished with an expected win-loss record between 5-9 and 9-5).

GOBias Industries: the League's New Dynasty?

- GOBias Industries cemented their place as the most accomplished franchise in DKEHeads, securing their 2nd straight championship and 4th title in 14 seasons.
- GOBias Industries was a juggernaut the entire year, leading the league with 123.0 points per game in the regular season (+10.4 PPG above league average, 1st of 12 teams) and exploding for 147.0 PPG in the playoffs.

- GOBias Industries started the season with a bang, earning the league's top score in Week 1 (145.62 points) and following up with 123.28 points in Week 2.
- GOBias Industries then went through a rough patch from Weeks 3-5, averaging 99.0 PPG in that span and falling to 3-2.
- However, GOBias Industries went on a rampage from Weeks 6-9, averaging 146.6 PPG in those four weeks and improving their record to 6-3. This stretch was punctuated by a 173.92 point explosion in Week 8 (the second-highest weekly score for any team this year).
  - The 4-week 146.6 PPG average was the highest 4-week point total of any team this year, and the 3rd-highest in the PPR era (2021-2025)

*Curiously, no teams from 2022 or 2023 on this list - parity was higher those years

- After a lackluster loss to Schmaap in Week 10, GOBias Industries won their last 4 games to finish the season 10-4 (averaging 121.1 PPG in that span). A 140.56 - 86.4 victory over Blunt Dissection in Week 14 was critical in securing a first round bye.
- Like all great champions, GOBias Industries elevated their game in the playoffs, crushing Mr. Fans Noodle Haus 156.06 - 105.72 in the semifinals before defeating Herbin Legends 138.00 - 100.90 in the final.
- Schulwolf is now 8-1 in playoff games and 4-0 in finals in five postseason appearances.

- GOBias Industries got exceptionally strong production from the core RB/WR positions:
  - QB: 16.3 PPG (9th of 12 teams, -1.8 PPG below league average). This was the one weak spot for GOBias Industries. Kyler Murray (16.1 points per start) was the Week 1 starter but quickly fell out of favor. GOBias Industries also got inconsistent play from Justin Fields (15.0 PPG) and Sam Darnold (13.7 PPG). However, the late-season acquisition of Joe Burrow (23.0 PPG in four starts) provided a major boost to GOBias Industries.
  - RB (top 2): 32.6 PPG (4th of 12 teams, +3.5 PPG above league average) Schulwolf got excellent production from James Cook (17.0 PPG overall, 16.9 PPG in regular season) and Derrick Henry (16.6 PPG overall, 13.9 PPG in regular season). Derrick Henry's 45.6 point explosion in the fantasy championships will forever live in GOBias Industries lore. GOBias Industries also received great production from Cam Skattebo (16.0 PPG in five starts) early in the season. While Skattebo suffered a season-ending injury in Week 8, he helped keep GOBias Industries afloat when Derrick Henry was struggling.
  - WR (top 3): 41.9 PPG (2nd of 12 teams, +7.6 PPG above league average): Jaxon Smith-Njigba (18.3 PPG) was the best receiver in football this year. JSN showed remarkable consistency, scoring at least 11 points in 14 of 15 appearances for GOBias Industries. Tee Higgins (12.7 PPG) had a solid year, while Zay Flowers (10.9 PPG) was a good WR3. Jakobi Meyers (9.0 PPG) was disappointing, but JSN's heroics carried the squad.
  - TE: 9.4 PPG (6th of 12 teams, +0.1 PPG above league average): Tucker Kraft (12.7 PPG) was terrific in the first half of the season, but a Week 9 injury forced GOBias Industries to rely on the disappointing Dallas Goedert (6.4 PPG) for the second half of the year.
  - DEF: 7.4 PPG (4th of 12 teams, -0.1 PPG below league average): New England provided great production (9.3 PPG in nine starts), but GOBias Industries averaged only 3.7 points in other games.

- K: 9.8 PPG (1st of 12 teams, +1.3 PPG above league average): GOBias Industries started the year with Cameron Dicker (9.7 PPG) and then seamlessly transitioned to Cam Little (10.8 PPG) when Dicker went on bye.
- Perhaps the most impressive aspect of GOBias Industries' title run was their resilience in the face of adversity. Season-ending injuries to Cam Skattebo and Tucker Kraft would have derailed most teams, but GOBias Industries showed true championship mettle by pushing through the setbacks.

Herbin Legends: the Worthy Finalist

- After many seasons of failure, Herbin Legends returned to respectability this year, dominating in the regular season and winning their first-ever playoff game before succumbing to GOBias Industries in the final.
- Herbin Legends scored 121.9 points per game (2nd of 12 teams), +9.3 PPG above league average.
- Herbin Legends got off to a slow start, going 0-2 to start the year, averaging only 86.0 PPG in that span (11th of 12 teams).
- With their backs to the wall, Herbin Legends reeled off 7 straight wins (and 10 wins in their next 11 games) to surge to the top of the league standings. Herbin Legends scored an average of 130.9 PPG during this torrid 11-game stretch.

- After a first-round bye, Herbin Legends stomped Fuck wit Tre Day 143.7 - 93.1 in the franchise's first ever playoff win.
- But Herbin Legends faltered in the final, mustering only 100.9 points in a blowout loss to GOBias Industries.
  - The performances of Drake London (0.9 points), Jalen Hurts (8.9 points), and DeVonta Smith (3.5 points) were particularly disappointing.
  - Herbin Legends opted not to start Rhamondre Stevenson (24.7 points) in a prime matchup against the Jets. Perhaps Brand was distracted by all the sunshine, golf, and tennis during his Palm Beach vacation...
- Herbin Legends averaged 136.2 PPG from Weeks 6-13, the best 8-game points stretch in the PPR era (2021-2025, regular season only).
  - Interestingly, Blunt Dissection posted the third-best 8-game stretch (133.7 PPG) from Weeks 3-10.

- Herbin Legends had a strong but unbalanced roster, with exceptional pass catchers but shaky running backs. (This was possibly a result of the autodraft).
  - QB: 19.5 PPG (4th of 12 teams, +1.4 above league average): Jalen Hurts (18.4 PPG overall, 19.1 regular season) took a step back this year after an amazing 2024, but was still able to produce above league average. Unfortunately for Herbin Legends, Hurts scored only 8.9 points in the championship, a major letdown.
  - RB (top 2): 22.9 PPG (12th of 12 teams, -6.2 below league average): it's shocking that a team as good as Herbin Legends ranked last in RB points - but this is likely due to Brand being able to start four WRs a game. Kyren Williams (14.3 PPG overall, 14.6 regular season) had a solid season, but given how prolific the Rams' offense was this year, 14.3 PPG was a bit underwhelming. The secondary options of RJ Harvey (10.8 PPG), Woody Marks (8.5 PPG), and Rhamondre Stevenson (6.1 PPG) showed occasional flashes but no real consistency.
  - WR (top 3): 45.2 PPG (1st of 12 teams, +10.9 above league average): WR was the core of Herbin Legends' team, with multiple elite options. George Pickens (15.9 PPG) delivered great value, Rashee Rice (16.4 PPG) was a beast from Weeks 7-14, and Drake London (13.8 PPG, 16.3 in regular season) had multiple spike weeks. DeVonta Smith (10.0 PPG) and Rashid Shaheed (8.8 PPG) provided additional depth.

- TE: 13.9 PPG (1st of 12 teams, +4.6 PPG above league average): Trey McBride as a major difference maker at the TE position, averaging 14.1 PPG overall.
- DEF: 6.5 PPG (9th of 12 teams, -1.0 PPG below league average): Herbin Legends struggled at DEF/ST from Weeks 1-5 (just 2.4 PPG), but stabilized the position with the Denver defense (8.6 points per start) in the second half of the season.
- K: 8.4 PPG (6th of 12 teams, 0.0 PPG vs. league average): Herbin Legends rotated through four different kickers, eventually landing on Ka'imi Fairbairn in the playoffs.
- Herbin Legends made the playoffs for the first time since 2013. (Herbin Legends qualified for the postseason in 2012 and 2013, but then waited 12 years for their next playoff berth).

Blunt Dissection: Regular Season Juggernaut, but Late-Season Fade

- Blunt Dissection dominated for much of the regular season, scoring 121.2 points per game (3rd of 12 teams, +8.5 PPG above league average).
- After a 78-point dud in Week 1 (lowest score in the league), Blunt Dissection went on an absolute tear, going 7-2 in their next 9 games and averaging a preposterous 134.6 PPG in that stretch.
- Blunt Dissection's season hit a high point in Week 10, when a thrilling 147.30 - 131.62 victory over Herbin Legends put Blunt Dissection in first place.
- However, Blunt Dissection stumbled down the stretch, averaging just 101.74 PPG in their last four games to finish 9-5.

Blunt Dissection: A Regular Season Powerhouse

- Blunt Dissection failed miserably in the playoffs, falling 99.18 - 79.96 to an underwhelming Mr. Fans Noodle Haus squad.
- 79.96 points was the lowest score in a playoff game in the PPR era (2021 - 2025).
- Blunt Dissection was undone by the complete disappearance of Justin Jefferson and regression from Jonathan Taylor.

- Blunt Dissection was strong across almost all positions. The squad's MVP was Jonathan Taylor, acquired through a brilliant pre-season trade with Pierogi Night.
  - QB: 19.5 PPG (3rd of 12 teams, +1.4 above league average): Patrick Mahomes (20.5 PPG) bounced back after a mediocre 2024, re-establishing himself as a premier fantasy option. Blunt Dissection had Drake Maye on the bench for most of the season.
  - RB (top 2): 34.6 PPG (3rd of 12 teams, +5.4 above league average): Jonathan Taylor (21.7 PPG) was arguably the Fantasy MVP this year. Taylor was a game-breaker, scoring +30 points on five separate occasions this season. Blunt Dissection struggled at times with RB depth, relying on Jordan Mason (11.1 PPG) in the first half of the season and trading for Jaylen Warren (11.1 PPG) in midseason. Tony Pollard (16.6 PPG in three starts) was a smart late-season acquisition.
  - WR (top 3): 36.7 PPG (4th of 12 teams, +2.4 above league average): Davante Adams (13.8 PPG) emerged as a pleasant surprise for Blunt Dissection. Justin Jefferson (9.2 PPG) started okay but faded badly down the stretch, ending the season as one of the biggest busts of 2025. Rome Odunze was an early-season stud (13.4 PPG), before Blunt Dissection smartly traded him away. Marvin Harrison Jr (9.6 PPG) and Stefon Diggs (9.2 PPG) were also decent.
  - TE: 7.4 PPG (9th of 12 teams, -1.8 below league average): Dalton Kincaid (11.2 PPG) had some strong games, but Week 1 starter Mark Andrews was a bust (4.4 points per start).
  - DEF: 7.2 PPG (5th of 12 teams, -0.3 below league average): Blunt Dissection rotated defenses but eventually settled on Cleveland (8.9 PPG). The Browns had some excellent games - especially a 26 point effort vs. Miami in Week 7 - but mustered only 1 point in Eli's playoff loss.
  - K: 9.1 PPG (4th of 12 teams, +0.6 above league average): Jake Bates (from Detroit) provided steady production.

Schmaap: Good Fortune Evaporates in Playoffs

- Schmaap had a decent season, finishing 9-5 but falling in the first round of the playoffs.
- Schmaap scored 113.0 PPG in the regular season (6th of 12 teams, +0.4 PPG above league average).
- Schmaap was one of the most consistent teams in the league, scoring between 100-126 points in 11 of 14 games this year.
- Schmaap started 2-3 but hit their stride in midseason, winning 6 straight games to improve to 8-3.
- Schmaap was particularly hot from Weeks 6-9, averaging 128.6 PPG in that span.
- While Schmaap finished 9-5, they had a statistical profile closer to a 7-7 team.

Schmaap: the Definition of Average

- Schmaap benefitted from good luck in the regular season, facing the easiest schedule in terms of “Points Allowed” - their opponents averaged only 103.5 PPG (-9.1 below league average)

- Schmaap's roster was carried by Christian McCaffrey, whose incredible production masked holes in other areas of the roster:
  - QB: 15.6 PPG (10th of 12 teams, -2.5 below league average): Trevor Lawrence (16.6 PPG in regular season) was inconsistent for much of the year, but delivered a virtuoso 44.3 point performance in the first round of the playoffs.
  - RB (top 2): 35.4 PPG (1st of 12 teams, +6.2 above league average): Christian McCaffrey (21.5 PPG) bounced back after an injury-riddled 2024. He scored +15 points in 12 of 14 games this season, demonstrating remarkable consistency. D'Andre Swift (13.6 PPG) was a strong RB2. Bucky Irving (14.3 PPG) excelled in limited action this year, but struggled with injury.
  - WR (top 3): 28.5 PPG (10th of 12 teams, -5.8 below league average): This was a problem area for Schmaap all season. Jaylen Waddle (10.8 PPG) was decent but not a true WR1. Alec Pierce (10.3 PPG) was a great waiver wire pickup, but DJ Moore (8.9 PPG) was disappointing. Jayden Higgins (7.0 PPG) and Christian Kirk (3.6 PPG) were uninspiring at best. Schmaap also inexplicably started Dont'e Thornton (0.8 PPG) in three games.
  - TE: 10.4 PPG (4th of 12 teams, +1.1 above league average): Outside of a 37 point explosion in Week 9, Brock Bowers (12.0 PPG) was a bit disappointing, but still above league average.
  - DEF: 8.7 PPG (2nd of 12 teams, +1.2 above league average): Schmaap rotated between Houston (9.7 PPG) and the LA Rams (6.8 PPG).
  - K: 8.2 PPG (8th of 12 teams, -0.3 above league average): Chris Boswell was fine, basically league average.

Fuck Wit Tre Day: From the Basement to 3rd Place

- Fuck wit Tre Day started the season slowly, but surged at the end to make the playoffs and secure 3rd place.
- Fuck wit Tre Day scored 115.1 PPG in the regular season (5th of 12 teams, +2.5 above league average).
- Fuck wit Tre Day struggled out of the gate, starting 1-5 and averaging only 101.6 PPG in their first six games.
- The turnaround started in Week 7 with a 121.06 - 107.28 win over Gee Whiz Darnell. Bo Nix's 40-point explosion against NYG was a season-saving performance for Fuck wit Tre Day.

- Fuck wit Tre Day continued the momentum with four straight wins to improve to 6-5. Fuck wit Tre Day averaged 131.1 PPG in their 5-game winning streak.
- After two duds in Weeks 12-13, Fuck wit Tre Day trounced Grip Hamilton Memorial 5K 158.78 - 70.2 to secure a playoff berth.

- Fuck wit Tre Day started the playoffs with a bang, knocking out Schmaap 148.92 - 122.70. But Fuck wit Tre Day was blown out by Herbin Legends 143.7 - 93.1 in the semifinals.
- Fuck wit Tre Day led the league in scoring in the second half of the season (Weeks 8-14), with 125.9 PPG. This is especially remarkable because Fuck wit Tre Day was dead last in scoring from Weeks 1-7 (104.3 PPG).

- Fuck wit Tre Day made some big trades in Week 3 to acquire Saquon Barkley and CeeDee Lamb, but Todd's most important asset was Josh Allen.
  - QB: 25.0 PPG (1st of 12 teams, +6.9 above league average): Josh Allen (22.8 PPG) was exceptional this season, easily ranking as the #1 QB in fantasy this year. Allen was a letdown in the semifinals (only 6.9 points vs. Cleveland). But he had plenty of highlights as well, including three games with over +35 points.
  - RB (top 2): 26.8 PPG (8th of 12 teams, -2.3 below league average): midseason pickup Saquon Barkley (12.9 PPG) took a step back from last year. Fuck wit Tre Day had a pair of dynamic but inconsistent rookies: Omarion Hampton (13.3 PPG) and TreVeyon Henderson (13.6 PPG). Hampton was injured from Weeks 6-13, but impressed in limited action. Henderson was the ultimate boom-or-bust RB: he had three games over +27 points, zero games between 11-27 points, and seven games under 11 points. David Montgomery (10.9 PPG) was occasionally productive. Fuck wit Tre Day spent $61 to acquire Tyrone Tracy, but Tracy scored just 5.1 PPG in three starts.
  - WR (top 3): 31.7 PPG (9th of 12 teams, -2.6 below league average): CeeDee Lamb wasn't quite an elite alpha (12.0 PPG) this year, while Jameson Williams (10.1 PPG) was electric but inconsistent. Keenan Allen (9.1) and Troy Franklin (8.1) were borderline starters. Todd traded away a lot of his WR depth (AJ Brown, Emeka Egbuka, and DK Metcalf) after Week 2 of the season. Parker Washington (12.0 PPG in four starts) was a late season bright spot.

- TE: 10.6 PPG (3rd of 12 teams, +1.4 above league average): Travis Kelce (9.5 PPG overall, 10.5 PPG regular season) is well past his prime, but he was still a decent fantasy option.
- DEF: 7.2 PPG (5th of 12 teams, -0.3 below league average): Fuck wit Tre Day went with Green Bay (7.9 PPG) for most of the year.
- K: 8.4 PPG (6th of 12 teams, -0.1 below league average): Fuck wit Tre Day used five different kickers.

Mr. Fans Noodle Haus: the Unlikely Semifinalist

- Mr. Fans Noodle Haus was solid for most of the year, but faded badly down the stretch, and was lucky to make the playoffs.
- Mr. Fans Noodle Haus scored 107.0 PPG in the regular season (9th of 12 teams, -5.6 below league average).
- Mr. Fan started a bit slow, going 1-3 in their first four games (105.8 PPG).
- However, Rico Dowdle's midseason emergence (more on that below) brought new life to Mr. Fan's season, as Mr. Fan went 3-1 in their next four games (122.5 PPG) to improve to 4-4.
- After Week 9, Mr. Fan's production fell off significantly, as the team scored just 97.6 PPG in their last six regular season games. Mr. Fan was fortunate to go 3-3 in that span to finish the year 7-7.
- The low point came in Week 15 with a 69.2 point dud, but Mr. Fan had accumulated enough wins to enter the playoffs as the #6 seed.

Mr. Fans Noodle Haus: Barely Hangs on to Playoff Spot

- Mr. Fan scored a surprise upset in the first round of the playoffs, defeating Blunt Dissection 99.18 - 79.96. (Although this victory had more to do with Blunt Dissection's collapse rather than Mr. Fan's success).
- Mr. Fan's plucky run came to an end against GOBias Industries, as they fell 156.06 - 105.72.
- It was the second straight year Mr. Fan was eliminated by GOBias Industries in the semifinals. (The 2024 loss was also a blowout, 149.72 - 104.68).
- Mr. Fan's Noodle Haus was the 4th weakest playoff team in league history, and the weakest playoff team in the PPR era (by far).

Mr. Fans Noodle Haus had a very unbalanced roster, with strong RBs but pathetic WRs:

- QB: 15.3 PPG (11th of 12 teams, -2.8 below league average): Mr. Fan started with Jordan Love (15.7 PPG) but he was a relative disappointment. Jay then pivoted to Daniel Jones (15.1 PPG), who was just okay from a fantasy perspective. Tyler Shough (19.0 PPG in three starts) was surprisingly effective in the playoffs.
- RB (top 2): 34.6 PPG (2nd of 12 teams, +5.5 above league average): Bijan Robinson (20.3 PPG) lived up to preseason hype and was the linchpin of Mr. Fan's roster. While Mr. Fan traded away Saquon Barkley early in the season, the void was filled by Rico Dowdle (15.5 PPG) and JK Dobbins (11.3 PPG). Dowdle had back-to-back +30 point performances in Weeks 5-6, along with a 27 point effort in Week 9. His pace eventually slowed, but Dowdle was one of the best pickups of the year.

- WR (top 3): 24.1 PPG (12th of 12 teams, -10.2 below league average): Mr. Fan had the weakest WRs in the league, by far. DK Metcalf (9.9 PPG) was ok and Jauan Jennings (9.8 PPG) had a strong second half of the season. But Calvin Ridley (6.2 PPG) was a big bust and Mike Evans (6.8 PPG in four starts) was injured for most of the year. Mr. Fan traded for Rome Odunze in midseason, but Odunze was a disaster, averaging just 5.2 PPG in six starts. Mr. Fan was often forced to start peripheral pieces like Kayshon Boutte (5.4 PPG) and Hollywood Brown (4.1 PPG).
- TE: 9.8 PPG (5th of 12 teams, +0.6 above league average): Mr. Fan traded Travis Kelce for Tyler Warren before Week 3, and Warren rewarded his manager with a solid season (9.9 PPG). Mr. Fan switched to Juwan Johnson (8.8 PPG) for the playoffs, with the Colts struggling on offense late in the season.
- DEF: 8.1 PPG (3rd of 12 teams, +0.6 above league average): Mr. Fan streamed defenses effectively in the regular season, scoring +14 points on four separate occasions with four different teams (Chicago, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Jacksonville).
- K: 8.5 PPG (5th of 12 teams, +0.0 vs. league average): Ka'imi Fairbairn was excellent per usual (10.8 PPG), but Mr. Fan struggled with Jake Elliott (6.4 PPG) in the second half of the season.

Pay Dirt & Pylons V: Late Season Collapse

- Pay Dirt & Pylons started the season brightly, but a brutal 4-game losing streak at the end of season left Cam out of the playoffs at 6-8.
- Pay Dirt & Pylons scored just 104.8 PPG (10th of 12 teams, -7.8 below league average) in the regular season.
- Pay Dirt had a great start to the season, scoring +110 points in each of their first five games (averaging 119 PPG) and wrapping up Week 6 with a 4-2 record.
- After two bad losses in Weeks 7-8, Pay Dirt bounced back with back-to-back wins in Weeks 9-10 to improve to 6-4. The playoffs appeared to be a formality.
- However, Pay Dirt & Pylons crumbled down the stretch, failing to score +100 points in four straight losses (86.6 PPG) to fall to 6-8, just missing out on the playoffs.

Pay Dirt & Pylons V: Late Season Collapse

- Pay Dirt's four-game run to close the season was the worst 4-game stretch to end a season in the PPR era.

- This was the third straight season where Pay Dirt & Pylons got 7th place. Pay Dirt took very different routes to 7th place in those three years (the 2023 + 2025 teams were weak, but the 2024 team was very strong).

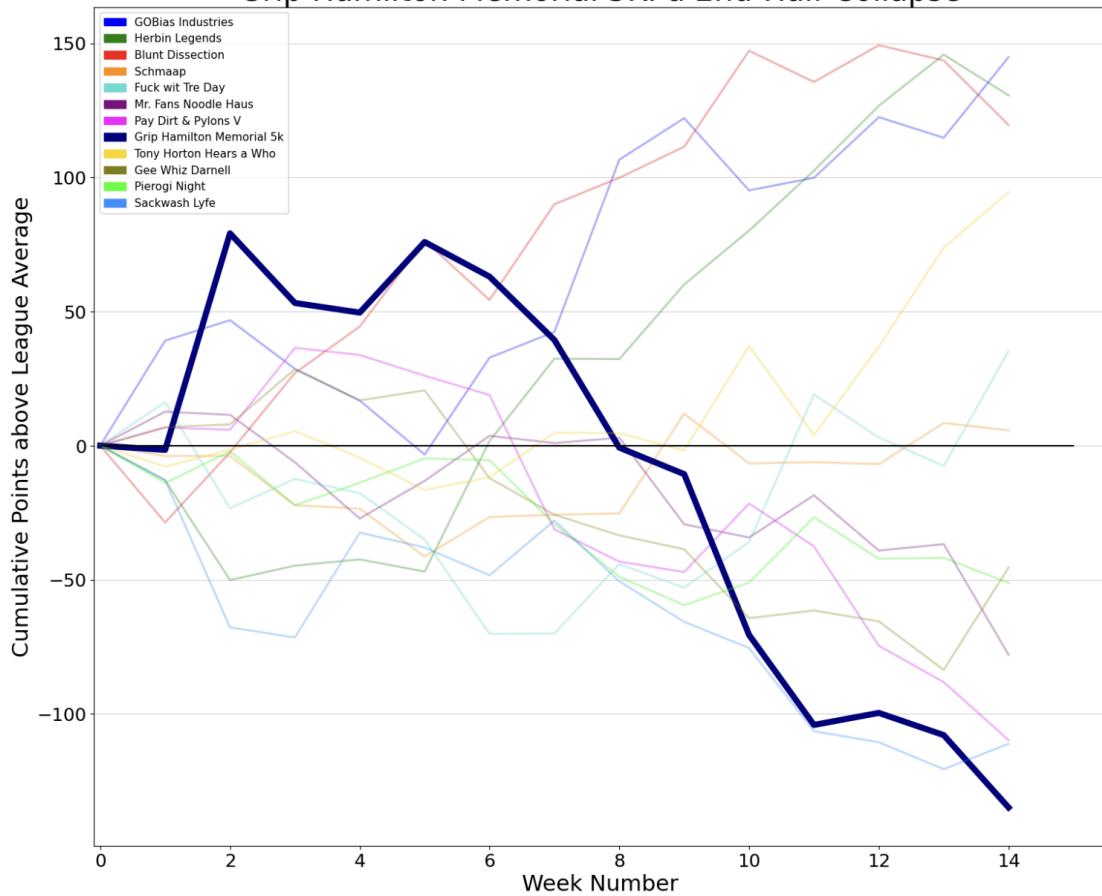

Pay Dirt & Pylons
Year	Place	Record	PPG	PPG vs. League Baseline
2023	7	7-8	102.7	-10.4
2024	7	8-7	123.3	+10.6
2025	7	6-8	104.8	-7.8

- Pay Dirt & Pylons struggled mightily at the pass-catching positions (WR and TE), while QB was an unexpected bright spot.
  - QB: 20.1 PPG (2nd of 12 teams, +2.0 above league average): in a year with only one elite fantasy QB (Josh Allen), Pay Dirt managed to score the 2nd most points at the position with just Caleb Williams and Jared Goff. Williams scored 19.9 PPG in seven starts, while Jared Goff posted 23.1 PPG in five starts.
  - RB (top 2): 31.6 PPG (5th of 12 teams, +2.5 above league average): De'Von Achane (18.8 PPG) was easily Pay Dirt's MVP. Achane was unbelievably consistent, scoring over +11 points in all 13 starts this year. Breece Hall (12.1 PPG) had an up-and-down season, as one epic 31-point game drove up his overall numbers. Kenneth Walker (9.1 PPG) was a major disappointment considering how strong Seattle was.
  - WR (top 3): 26.9 PPG (11th of 12 teams, -7.4 below league average): injuries at the WR position killed Pay Dirt's hopes for contending. Garrett Wilson (11.6 PPG) started strong, but suffered an injury in Week 6 and delivered a goose egg in his final appearance in Week 10. Tyreek Hill (10.8 PPG) suffered a season-ending injury in Week 4, while Travis Hunter (8.8 PPG) did not play after Week 7. Ladd McConkey (9.9 PPG) remained healthy but failed to meet preseason expectations. Otherwise, Pay Dirt was forced to rely on underachieving players like Jerry Jeudy (6.4 PPG) and Darnell Mooney (6.5 PPG).
  - TE: 4.9 PPG (12th of 12 teams, -4.4 above league average): Pay Dirt had no consistent answers at TE. Week 1 starter David Njoku was useless (5.0 PPG), losing ground to Harold Fannin in the Cleveland offense. Theo Johnson (6.5 PPG) was a mediocre option in the second half of the season. Pay Dirt picked up Oronde Gadsden (6.0 PPG in two starts), but missed out on his big spike weeks in Weeks 7-8.
  - DEF: 5.5 PPG (12th of 12 teams, -2.0 below league average): Pay Dirt held onto Detroit (5.67 PPG) for most of the season, but the Lions were disappointing. Detroit was particularly poor down the stretch, averaging 1.4 PPG in the final five games.
  - K: 9.7 PPG (2nd of 12 teams, +1.2 vs. league average): Pay Dirt rotated kickers before getting a late-season boost from Brandon Aubrey (12.3 PPG in four starts).

Grip Hamilton Memorial 5K: Sudden Rise and Fall

- Grip Hamilton began the season with a bang, dropping 196.4 points in a Week 2 performance for the ages. But an injury to Malik Nabers crippled the squad, and the team collapsed in the second half of the season.
- Grip Hamilton scored just 103.0 PPG (12th of 12 teams, -9.6 below league average). Grip Hamilton ranked last in total points despite leading the league in points as late as Week 6.

Grip Hamilton Memorial 5K: a 2nd-Half Collapse

- Grip Hamilton won a 104.88 - 102.62 nailbiter vs. Schmaap in Week 1 before putting up 196.4 points in a Week 2 beatdown vs. Pay Dirt & Pylons. 196.4 points was the highest single-game score ever recorded in the regular season.
- Grip Hamilton reached the halfway mark of the season at 4-3 (120 PPG), but then the bottom fell out, as Grip Hamilton lost 4 straight games (75.4 PPG) to fall to 4-7.
- Grip Hamilton pulled out a pair of gritty victories in Weeks 12-13 (114.84 - 109.64 vs. Schmaap and 101.76 - 96.44 vs. Pay Dirt), to earn a chance for a playoff spot entering Week 14.
- But Grip Hamilton's hopes were extinguished in a 83.48 - 153.34 loss to Fuck wit Tre Day.
- Grip Hamilton averaged 120 PPG in the first half of the season but just 86 PPG in the second half of the year, a ridiculous -34.0 point decline.

- Grip Hamilton went 4-0 vs. Schmaap and Pay Dirt, but 2-8 vs. the rest of the league.
- Grip Hamilton surrendered the most points in the league, as opponents averaged 119.9 PPG against them.
- But Grip Hamilton was still able to claw their way to a 6-8 record, due to winning lots of close games. Besides an 81-point blowout in Week 2, Kevin's five other wins came by an average of only 4.2 points.

13	Grip Hamilton Memorial 5k	Pay Dirt & Pylons V	101.76	96.44	+5.32

- Grip Hamilton's autodraft led to a WR-heavy roster, but crippling holes elsewhere:
  - QB: 14.3 PPG (12th of 12 teams, -3.8 below league average): Baker Mayfield (15.1 PPG) had a disappointing season, and a midseason pivot to JJ McCarthy (13.2 PPG in three starts) also didn't fare well.
  - RB (top 2): 24.1 PPG (11th of 12 teams, -5.1 below league average): This position honestly went better than expected for Grip Hamilton, given how little draft budget was spent on RBs. Javonte Williams (14.9 PPG) had an excellent bounce-back season. Kareem Hunt was actually a serviceable RB2 (11.3 PPG), but Grip Hamilton had almost no other options at RB; Dylan Sampson (7.6 PPG in three starts) was quickly irrelevant in the Cleveland offense.
  - WR (top 3): 37.6 PPG (3rd of 12 teams, +3.3 above league average): Amon-Ra St. Brown was once again elite (14.8 PPG). Ja'Marr Chase (14.7 PPG) took a big step back from his all-conquering 2024, but still had a good year. But what really killed Grip Hamilton was a Week 4 injury to Malik Nabers (12.0 PPG in four starts). Romeo Doubs (8.4 PPG) had one 27-point game but was otherwise lackluster.
  - TE: 9.0 PPG (8th of 12 teams, -0.3 below league average): Late in the season, Grip Hamilton often started two TEs - Hunter Henry (7.9 PPG) and Zach Ertz (7.0 PPG) - but both were mediocre.
  - DEF: 6.6 PPG (8th of 12 teams, -0.9 below league average): Grip Hamilton streamed nine different defenses in 14 games. One lowlight was starting the Cincinnati D/ST against the New York Jets....and ending up with -10 points!
  - K: 6.5 PPG (12th of 12 teams, -2.0 vs. league average): I guess Matt Prater (7.0 PPG in 11 starts) wasn't that good? He did not reach +10 points after Week 2.

Tony Horton Hears a Who: Elite Scoring, Lackluster Results

- Tony Horton Hears a Who had a great statistical season, scoring 119.4 PPG (4th of 12 teams, +6.8 above league average). But Will could not translate these points to wins, ending the year with a 5-9 record.
- Based on points, Tony Horton should have had 8.4 wins (-3.4 wins below expectation). This difference (-3.4 wins below expected) was the worst outcome in the PPR era (more details available in the "Simulations" section of the report).
- Tony Horton Hears a Who was solid for most of the year, but had unbelievably poor luck.
- Will's team started 2-7, despite ranking 5th in points during that span (114.3 PPG). A 141.32 - 137.54 loss to Sacko rival Sackwash Lyfe in Week 7 was a particularly crushing blow.
- But from then on, Tony Horton went on a tear, averaging 128.5 PPG in their final five games.
- Tony Horton Hears a Who led the league in scoring in Weeks 10, 12 and 13, posting over +140 points in each of those games.

- Tony Horton had lots of blowout wins, as their 5 wins came by an average of +53.5 points.
- Tony Horton was league-average at most positions, but the Seattle D/ST was a big difference maker:
  - QB: 17.8 PPG (6th of 12 teams, -0.3 below league average): Tony Horton started with Jayden Daniels (19.8 PPG in four starts), who played well in limited action but missed most of the season to injury. Justin Herbert (16.1 PPG) was inconsistent, but a late season pickup of Matthew Stafford (19.3 PPG in three starts) paid immediate dividends.
  - RB (top 2): 28.8 PPG (6th of 12 teams, -0.3 below league average): Jahmyr Gibbs (21.4 PPG) was absolutely sensational. Gibbs scored over +33 points in 4 of his 7 final games this season, with the high point being a 49.9 point explosion vs. the Giants in Week 12. Tony Horton had almost no RB depth, as Nick Chubb (8.2 PPG), Aaron Jones (7.7 PPG), and Rachaad White (8.2 PPG) were all disappointing.
  - WR (top 3): 36.4 PPG (5th of 12 teams, +2.1 above league average): AJ Brown (14.0 PPG) had a slow start but actually played really well down the stretch. On the flip side, Emeka Egbuka (10.6 PPG) started very strong but faded in the second half. Chris Olave (11.3 PPG) was a solid contributor, while Quentin Johnston (8.4 PPG) was very inconsistent. Will sadly never actually started Tony Horton.
  - TE: 9.1 PPG (7th of 12 teams, -0.2 below league average): Will started with Sam LaPorta (9.7 PPG) but pivoted to Kyle Pitts (8.0 PPG) after the former's injury. Unfortunately for Will (but fortunately for the rest of the league), Kyle Pitts did not have his 40-point explosion until Week 15.

- DEF: 13.1 PPG (1st of 12 teams, +5.7 above league average): Seattle (12.1 PPG) was a monstrous unit almost all year, but especially down the stretch; the Seahawks scored over +20 points three times in the last five games. The one week Kitchell didn't start Seattle? 27 points from Tampa Bay in Week 8 (vs. New Orleans).
- K: 9.6 PPG (3rd of 12 teams, +1.2 above league average): after starting with the underwhelming Jake Elliott (6.9 PPG), Tony Horton got amazing production from Jason Myers (13.7 PPG) in the final six weeks of the season.
- Surprisingly, Tony Horton Hears a Who was only the third-best 9th place team in league history.
  - Upon closer examination, the 9th place teams in DKEHeads history have been oddly strong. In fact, the average 9th place team has finished +0.9 PPG above league average - better than 6th, 7th, and 8th place.

Gee Whiz Darnell: a Steady Midseason Fade

- Gee Whiz Darnell was beset by injuries, and fell steadily down the standings after Week 5. Gee Whiz narrowly avoided the Sacko (and saved their season) with a strong Week 14 performance.
- Gee Whiz Darnell scored 109.4 PPG (7th of 12 teams, -3.3 below league average).
- Gee Whiz Darnell had a decent start to the season, going 3-2 in their first five games and averaging 118.0 PPG.

- But injuries across the roster took their toll, and Gee Whiz Darnell endured a brutal 6-game losing streak to fall to 3-8. Gee Whiz averaged just 99.0 PPG during the 6-game slide.
- With their season on the line, Gee Whiz Darnell secured a crucial 106.32 - 106.26 victory over Sacko challenger Sackwash Lyfe in Week 12. (More on this later in the report).
- After another loss in Week 13 dropped them to 4-9, Gee Whiz Darnell delivered their best performance of the season in Week 14 against Tony Horton Hears a Who, prevailing 148.64 - 131.14 in a titanic struggle.

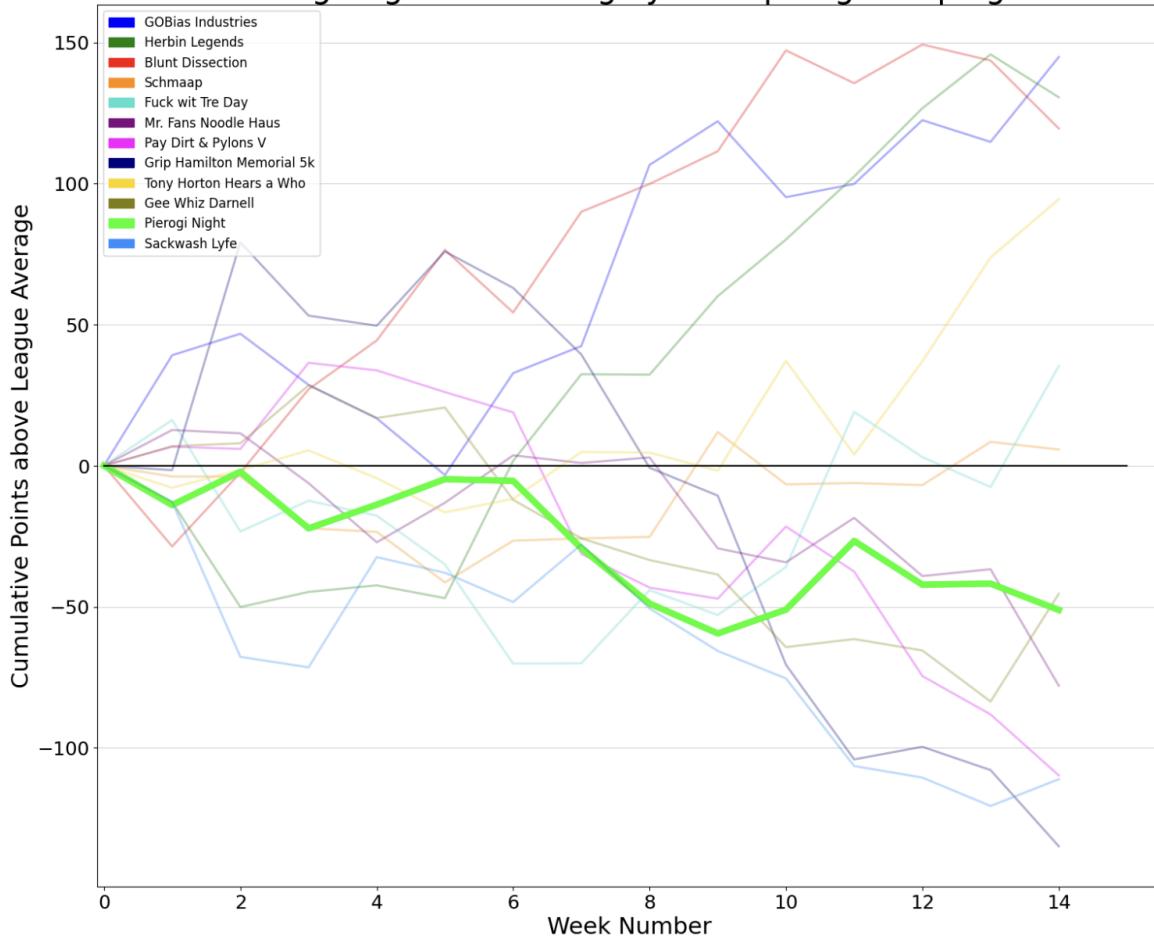

- Gee Whiz Darnell was slightly below average at most positions:
  - QB: 17.6 PPG (8th of 12 teams, -0.5 below league average): Lamar Jackson (17.1 PPG) took a huge step back from 2024 (when he averaged 24-25 PPG). Jackson started hot (27.6 PPG in first three games), but scored just 11.9 PPG in six more starts. Gee Whiz Darnell definitely regrets dropping Matthew Stafford (20.8 PPG in three starts).
  - RB (top 2): 27.5 PPG (7th of 12 teams, -1.7 below league average): Travis Etienne (13.3 PPG) had a nice bounce-back year after a terrible 2024. Chase Brown (12.6 PPG) struggled mightily at the start, but rebounded impressively in the second half of the year. Gee Whiz's major disappointment this year was Chuba Hubbard (11.8 PPG in five starts); the average point totals look decent, but Chuba lost his starting job to Rico Dowdle in midseason.
  - WR (top 3): 32.1 PPG (8th of 12 teams, -2.2 below league average): Michael Pittman (11.4 PPG) had a solid year, but Terry McLaurin (9.6 PPG in six starts) had an injury-riddled campaign and regressed badly from 2024. Ricky Pearsall (7.4 PPG) flamed out spectacularly after an injury derailed a promising start. But

- Gee Whiz Darnell was saved by waiver wire acquisitions Michael Wilson (19.9 PPG in four games) and Christian Watson (11.8 PPG in five games).
- TE: 12.7 PPG (2nd of 12 teams, +3.4 above league average): George Kittle (11.0 PPG) suffered a Week 1 injury but produced in the second half of the year. Jake Ferguson (12.3 PPG in seven games) was a pleasant early-season surprise when CeeDee Lamb was injured.
  - DEF: 6.1 PPG (11th of 12 teams, -1.4 below league average): Gee Whiz started 9 different defenses in 2025, as player injuries prevented the team from holding two D/STs on the roster.
  - K: 8.1 PPG (10th of 12 teams, -0.4 below league average): Gee Whiz got decent production from Brandon Aubrey (9.6 PPG), but struggled at the position after dropping Aubrey during the bye (5.4 PPG).

Pierogi Night: a Thoroughly Uninspiring Campaign

- Pierogi Night sabotaged their season when they traded away Jonathan Taylor for Nico Collins in preseason. This calamitous trade would haunt Pierogi Night for the entire season.
- Pierogi Night scored 109.0 PPG (8th of 12 teams, -3.7 below league average).
- Pierogi Night was fortunate to win in Week 1 (92.52 - 77.84) but impressed in a 127.44 - 114.48 Week 2 win.
- The squad dropped their next two games, but a 128.18 - 99.02 beatdown of GOBias Industries in Week 5 improved their record to 3-2.
- But the good vibes didn't last long. Pierogi Night promptly went on a 5-game losing streak to fall out of playoff contention. Pierogi Night did not perform horribly in this stretch (averaging 105.3 PPG), but never did quite enough to earn a victory.
- Pierogi Night delivered a crucial 128.12 - 106.62 victory over Sacko rival Gee Whiz Darnell in Week 11 to snap the losing streak and improve to 4-7.
- After two losses in Weeks 12-13, Pierogi Night edged out Herbin Legends 101.14 - 95.3 in Week 14 to escape the Sacko.
  - Entering Monday Night Football, Pierogi Night appeared destined for a 12th place finish, needing Jalen Hurts and DeVonta Smith to not outscore Kimani Vidal by more than 1 point.
  - Miraculously, Hurts had 0.4 points (including -4 on one play with two fumbles), Smith had only 5.7, and Vidal posted 10.9 to save Pierogi Night.

Pierogi Night: a Thoroughly Uninspiring Campaign

- Pierogi Night had five losses by under 10 points, most in the league.
- Pierogi Night was arguably the most consistent team in the league this year, never scoring below 90 points yet never scoring above 130 points in any game this season.
- Pierogi Night's standard deviation in weekly scoring was 14.9; meaning Pierogi Night had the least variation in week-to-week scoring (most stable team).
- Pierogi Night had the 2nd-lowest standard deviation in scoring in the PPR era (60 teams).

- Pierogi Night was average to below-average at every position:
  - QB: 18.4 PPG (5th of 12 teams, +0.3 above league average): Dak Prescott (19.0 PPG) overall had a strong year and remains one of the more underrated QBs in fantasy.
  - RB (top 2): 26.1 PPG (9th of 12 teams, -3.0 below league average): Josh Jacobs (16.0 PPG) had another terrific season, despite battling lingering injuries near the end of the campaign. Alvin Kamara (7.9 PPG) looked washed-up and was a major disappointment. Kimani Vidal (12.1 PPG) was inconsistent but had some good spike weeks. Pierogi Night's season would have looked much different had they kept Jonathan Taylor.
  - WR (top 3): 35.6 PPG (6th of 12 teams, +1.3 above league average): Nico Collins (12.8 PPG) came nowhere close to matching Jonathan Taylor's value, but was still Pierogi Night's best receiver. Tetairoa McMillan (11.3 PPG) had a solid rookie season. Brian Thomas Jr. was arguably the biggest bust (8.5 PPG) in the league this season. Honestly, I have no idea why BTJ played so poorly after averaging 13.2 PPG his rookie year, and having a better offensive ecosystem in Jacksonville in 2025. Deebo Samuel (10.9 PPG) was decent. Overall, Pierogi Night had strong depth at WR but no elite superstars.
  - TE: 7.4 PPG (10th of 12 teams, -1.9 above league average): After struggling at TE in the first half of the season, Pierogi Night settled on Dalton Schultz (8.2 PPG), who was fine.
  - DEF: 6.9 PPG (7th of 12 teams, -0.6 below league average): The Philadelphia defense was surprisingly mediocre for fantasy this year (5.8 PPG). Pierogi Night got better production later in the season from Baltimore (8.8 PPG in five games)
  - K: 8.2 PPG (8th of 12 teams, -0.3 below league average): Pierogi Night used three different kickers, although they probably regret dropping Ka'imi Fairbairn (13.0 PPG in three starts).

Sackwash Lyfe: a Season to Forget

- Sackwash Lyfe had a lackluster season, finishing with a 5-9 record and landing in 12th place. A strong "Toilet Bowl" performance, however, saved Sackwash Lyfe from Sacko punishment.
- Sackwash Lyfe scored just 104.7 PPG (11th of 12 teams, -7.9 below league average).

- Sackwash Lyfe started the season terribly, scoring 93.62 points in a Week 1 loss before hitting rock bottom with a 60.74-point dud in Week 2.
- Sackwash Lyfe rebounded with two straight wins to improve to 2-2, the highlight being a 156.84 point explosion in Week 4.
- Sackwash Lyfe went 2-2 in their next 4 games to stay at .500 (4-4 record).
- However, Sackwash Lyfe fell apart and lost their next 5 games, averaging just 97.2 PPG during the 5-game losing streak.
- With their backs to the wall in the final week, Sackwash Lyfe delivered one of their best efforts of the season, a 119.96 - 69.2 victory over Mr. Fans Noodle Haus. However, results in other games kept Sackwash Lyfe in 12th place at the end of the regular season.
- Unexpectedly, however, Yahoo offered a consolation tournament, giving Sackwash Lyfe a chance for redemption. Sackwash Lyfe seized that opportunity, falling 142.82 - 124.34 in a tough-luck loss to Will before blasting away Gee Whiz Darnell 147.52 - 117.4 in the 11th place game.

- Sackwash Lyfe was poor for much of the season, but strong relative to other 12th place teams in DKEHeads history. Sackwash Lyfe was the 5th strongest "Sacko team" in league history (out of 15 total).

- Sackwash Lyfe struggled a bit at the RB position and had very little WR depth outside Puka Nacua:
  - QB: 17.7 PPG (7th of 12 teams, -0.4 below league average): Jaxson Dart (23.5 PPG in six games) was an absolute stud, and one of the waiver wire pickups of the year. Dart's emergence helped compensate for the loss of Joe Burrow (7.9 PPG in two starts) early in Week 2. Jordan Love (22.5 PPG in two starts) played very well in Weeks 13-14.
  - RB (top 2): 24.6 PPG (10th of 12 teams, -4.6 PPG below league average): Ashton Jeanty (12.4 PPG) was a minor disappointment given preseason hype, while Quinshon Judkins (12.1 PPG) surprisingly dominated the Cleveland backfield. Zach Charbonnet (9.1 PPG) was a decent flex piece. Sackwash Lyfe had bad injury luck early in the year, as James Conner and Austin Ekeler suffered season-ending injuries before Week 3.
  - WR (top 3): 35.0 PPG (7th of 12 teams, +0.7 PPG above league average): Puka Nacua (17.7 PPG) was a monster, scoring double-digit points in 11 of 12 starts this year. Courtland Sutton (10.2 PPG) started strong but faded late. Khalil Shakir (8.3 PPG) was a mediocre third option, and barely better than Xavier Worthy (8.0 PPG).
  - TE: 6.7 PPG (11th of 12 teams, -2.6 below league average): TJ Hockenson (5.1 PPG) was dreadful, and failed to reach double-digit points in all 11 appearances. Harold Fannin (12.3 PPG in three starts) was a better option, but was often (confusingly) left on the bench.
  - DEF: 6.4 PPG (10th of 12 teams, -1.0 below league average): Sackwash Lyfe got very little from the Chicago defense (3.8 PPG in five starts) late in the season.
  - K: 7.1 PPG (11th of 12 teams, -1.3 below league average): Tommy might be kicking and screaming to remove kickers after struggling with Will Lutz (6.4 PPG in nine games). Lutz failed to reach 10 points in any of those games.

- Top Score of the Year: Grip Hamilton Memorial 5K, 196.4 points in Week 2

- Grip Hamilton stunned the league with an incredible performance in Week 2
- The three star WRs (Amon-Ra St. Brown, Malik Nabers, and Ja'Marr Chase) each erupted for more than +29 points. Just a mind-blowing display of dominance.
- Grip Hamilton also got strong contributions from Javonte Williams (22 points), Zach Ertz (15.4), Romeo Doubs (10.3), Baker Mayfield (19.9), and Matt Prater (13).
- Their lowest scorer (LA Rams defense) still notched 9 points.
- The 196.4 point output was the highest regular season score of all time (and 2nd highest overall).

- Lowest-Scoring Matchup: Sackwash Lyfe def. Grip Hamilton Memorial 5K, 87.06 - 69.58 in Week 3

- Grip Hamilton Memorial 5K got screwed by the Bengals D/ST, who surrendered -10 points after getting sliced apart by the New York Jets (of all teams!)
- Baker Mayfield (4.08 points) was another major flop for Kevin.
- Sackwash Lyfe did nothing special, with only three players hitting double-digit points, but 87 points was enough for the victory.
- This game was the 4th lowest-scoring contest in the PPR era (2021 - 2025), with just 156.64 combined points.

- Tightest Game: Gee Whiz Darnell def. Sackwash Lyfe, 106.32 - 106.26 in Week 12 (+0.06 points)

- In a game with major Sacko implications, Gee Whiz Darnell barely scraped by Sackwash Lyfe in a Monday Night thriller.
- 0.06 points is the equivalent of 1.5 passing yards or 0.6 rushing yards.
- On Monday Night Football, Gee Whiz Darnell needed George Kittle and Ricky Pearsall to outscore Bryce Young by 4.28 points.
- None of the players met their projected totals (Kittle had 10.8, Pearsall had 1.8, and Young had 8.26)
- The pivotal play was a Ricky Pearsall 2-yard rush with 2:29 left in the 4th quarter, enabling Gee Whiz Darnell to erase a 0.14 point deficit and pull ahead by 0.06.
- It was the closest regular season contest in the PPR era (and second-closest overall).

- Biggest Blowout: Tony Horton Hears a Who def. Grip Hamilton Memorial 5K, 150.5 - 51.62 in Week 10 (+98.88 points)
  - Sitting at 2-7, Tony Horton took a big step towards avoiding the Sacko with a blowout victory over Grip Hamilton.
  - The 150.5 points was the highest score for Tony Horton Hears a Who this season. Key contributors included Jahmyr Gibbs (36.7 points), the Seattle defense (20 points), and Emeka Egbuka (20.5 points).
  - Grip Hamilton's 51.62 points was the lowest of any team this season.
  - The +98.88 point margin was the 3rd-highest in the PPR era..

Simulations

- I simulated the season 100,000 times to estimate the “expected record” of each team given their actual point totals. Results below:

Season Simulations
(100,000 simulations of the season using actual matchups from Week 1-11, random matchups from Weeks 12-14)
Team	Expected Wins	Expected Losses	Actual Record	Total Points	Playoffs (% of sims)	Top 2 Bye (% of sims)	Sacko (% of sims)	Diff. Wins (Act-Exp)
GOBias Industries	9.1	4.9	10-4	1721.35	91%	49%	0%	+0.9
Herbin Legends	8.9	5.1	10-4	1707.50	88%	43%	0%	+1.1
Blunt Dissection	8.7	5.3	9-5	1696.09	87%	39%	0%	+0.3
Tony Horton Hears a Who	8.4	5.6	5-9	1671.02	82%	30%	1%	-3.4

Grip Hamilton Memorial 5k	5.1	9.0	6-8	1441.80	12%	1%	27%	+1.0

Orange indicates teams that had bad luck. Blue indicates teams that were lucky

Incredibly, this is the second straight season where Will's team has underperformed his expected Win total by at least 3 wins. (Last year, “Brady come back u can blame it” finished 3-12 but their expected record was 6.1 wins to 8.9 losses).

- Will's 2024 and 2025 seasons represent the two “most unlucky” seasons in the PPR era (2021-2025)

Most Unlucky Teams, PPR Era (2021-2025)							Difference: Actual vs. Expected Wins
Team	Owner	Year	Wins	Losses	Expected Wins		Expected Wins
Tony Horton Hears a Who	Will	2025	5	9	8.4		-3.4
Brady come back u can blame it	Will	2024	3	12	6.1		-3.1

Movin' On Up	Todd	2022	9	6	7.4		+1.6
Sackwash Lyfe	Tommy	2021	8	7	6.4		+1.6

The only team this year with unusually good luck was Schmaap.

- Schmaap was around league average in scoring and had the statistical profile of a 7-7 team. However, their actual record was 9-5.
- Kevin's teams have enjoyed a stretch of good fortune the last four years. His teams from 2022-2024 rank in the top 10 luckiest teams in the PPR era (+1.8, +3.1, +2.7), and Grip Hamilton Memorial 5K outperformed their expected record by +1.0 wins in 2025.

League Average (per game)	18.1	29.1	34.3	9.3	7.5	8.5

- I can't get over how Herbin Legends was dead last in RB scoring but still 2nd overall. Just shows how good their WRs/TEs were.
- Major outliers:
  - QB: Fuck wit Tre Day was +6.9 PPG above average, +4.9 PPG over 2nd place
  - RB: none - talent was spread out across teams. The teams with one amazing RB (e.g. Jonathan Taylor, Christian McCaffrey) tended to have weak RB depth.
  - WR: Herbin Legends (+10.9 PPG above average ) and GOBias Industries (+7.5 PPG) easily had the strongest WRs in the league. On the flip side, Mr. Fans

- Noodle Haus (-10.2 PPG below average) and Pay Dirt & Pylons (-7.4 PPG) struggled.
- TE: Herbin Legends (+4.6 PPG above average) benefitted immensely from Trey McBride. Pay Dirt also struggled at TE (-4.4 PPG).
  - DEF: that Seattle defense was incredible for Tony Horton Wears a Who (+5.7 PPR above average, +4.5 over 2nd place).
  - K: no outliers; evidence that kickers don't have much impact over the course of an entire season.
